Neat hectares of the stuff reserved

For those in need of flower or tree.

Film documentaries on TV

And when I need to escape, panting,

Stephen and Joseph Montgolfier were paper manufacturers in France, but they had been interested in flying for many years. One night in 1782, Joseph noticed something that gave him an idea. He was sitting in front of fire when he saw some pieces of scorched paper floating up the chimney. "Look at that", he said to Stephen, "the force that is lifting that paper might be used to lift a light object too".

Soon afterwards the Montgolfier brothers started experimenting with the idea (They tried their first experiment with a big silk bag which was opened at the bottom.) The hot air filled the silk bag, and much to the brothers' delight, they saw it rise up in the air. They had created the first hot air balloon.

Then they built a huge balloon of linen and paper. On June 5th, 1783 they sent this balloon up in the village of Annonay, where they lived, the entire village gazed in wonder.

A month later, the Montgolfier brothers decided to send up another hot air balloon, this time with animals in it. They tied a cage to the balloon, which had a rooster, a duck and a sheep in it, to check its safety.

Some time later the brothers announced that they were going to make a balloon for a man to fly in it. Pilatre de Rozier, a young physics teacher, stepped up and said, "it will be great honour to be the first man to fly". Thus, the world witnessed the first 'flying man'.
